POWERS, DUTIES AND RIGHTS

Highway Law provides detailed and practical commentary on the law relating to the creation, upkeep, development and ownership of highways. Written by Stephen Sauvain QC, Highway Law guides readers through the powers and duties of highway authorities, the rights of users of the highway, and the rights and responsibilities of those who own land around the highway.

Highway Law examines in detail the whole structure of highway law and addresses matters of particular interest to the practitioner such as stopping up and diversion orders, traffic orders, street works, footpaths, bridleways and bridges. The book references all recent legislation, relevant statutory instruments and case law.

LOGICAL AND COHERENT

Highway Law is set out in a logical and coherent manner by putting the relevant statutory provisions and common law principles into their mutual context. Consideration is also given to the history and development of the law where this aids understanding of the subject.

EXAMINES KEY TOPICS

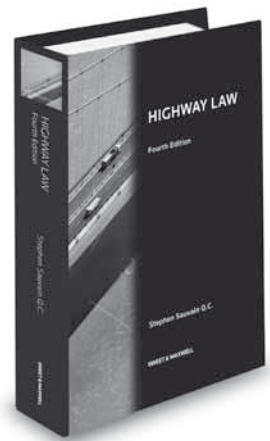

Highway Law is an accessible and useful text that will assist those whose practice involves the workings of highway law. Highway Law:

- Provides clear guidance on the law delivered in a straightforward, accessible style
- Sets out the powers and duties of highway authorities
- Clarifies the rights of highway users
- Deals with the rights and duties of adjoining landowners
- Explains both common law rights and the relevant statutory provisions
- Examines key topics such as traffic orders, footpaths, bridleways and right of access
- Easy-to-use navigation by chapter and by paragraph
- Deals with the impact of the Traffic Management Act 2004 in a new section
- Incorporates recent legislation, relevant statutory instruments and case law
- Comments on the effect of the Planning Act 2008
